The internationally recognised home of romantic poet, John Keats, in Hampstead has been awarded funding to make improvements to its visitor entrance, garden, lighting, and toilet facilities.

As part of the new work, the main entrance will be improved and made more accessible; lighting will be installed to illuminate the paths; and the toilet block will be refurbished. The Grade I-listed house, where Keats lived from 1818 to 1820, underwent a major refurbishment between 2007 and 2009, funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund, to reconfigure the garden layout and planting.

Graham Packham, chairman of City of London Corporation's Culture, Heritage and Libraries Committee, said:

"My colleagues, in particular, the curatorial team at Keats House, and I were delighted that we received funding from Camden Council's Community Infrastructure Levy fund, for this important work. We are looking forward to seeing the changes made by Paul Vick and his team, and I am sure that these improvements will make a real difference to people who visit this beautiful house."

Commenting on the project, Paul Vick, founder and director of Paul Vick Architects, said that he and his team are "delighted to be involved with such an important museum".
